

Certified Energy Analyst Practice Test Questions and Answers

1. What does the term "energy intensity" measure in energy analysis?

- A) Total energy consumption per year
- B) Energy consumption per unit of economic output
- C) Peak energy demand
- D) Renewable energy percentage

2. Which building component typically accounts for the largest portion of energy loss in residential buildings?

- A) Windows
- B) Doors
- C) Walls and insulation
- D) Floors

3. What is the primary purpose of conducting an energy audit?

- A) To increase energy consumption
- B) To identify energy efficiency opportunities and potential savings
- C) To install new equipment
- D) To meet regulatory requirements only

4. Which metric is commonly used to measure HVAC system efficiency?

- A) BTU (British Thermal Unit)
- B) SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio)
- C) kWh (Kilowatt-hour)
- D) COP (Coefficient of Performance)

Answers: 1-B 2-C 3-B 4-B

For More Certified Energy Analyst Questions and Answers FREE, Certified Energy Analyst Online Prep Training, Certified Energy Analyst Exam, Certified Energy Analyst Study Guide, Certified Energy Analyst Flashcards, Certified Energy Analyst Quizzes visit:

Certified Energy Analyst Practice Test

Practice Test Geeks © All Rights Reserved